VANCOUVER, CANADA – (January 8, 2010) – Nerd Corps Entertainment is looking for aspiring super villains to help test its first online collectible card game, the League of Super Evil CCG of DOOM! All are invited to play, test, and spread their villainous deeds across our game servers.

The L.O.S.E. CCG of DOOM! is a free-to-play online multiplayer collectible card game starring the hilarious characters and settings from the League of Super Evil cartoon, which began airing on Cartoon Network last March. The League is a band of four Super Villains who have set their sights on nothing less than the ultimate goal of total global supremacy! Too bad they're totally incompetent and share that goal with an unhealthy number of fellow villains who happen to live in the same city.

Players can customize their own deck with a selection of more than 400 unique cards, using an extensive online deck builder, and play online with friends (or enemies). Choose from more than 75 characters from the show to build an evil team (used 1980s Shiruken Robot, a rare Canadian Running Hamster, a pirate and a super computer? Go for it!). Earn Evil Points to customize super villain avatars and evil lairs (A lair made of meat or a pet penguin assassin? You got it!).

During the beta all participants get gloriously evil access to all of the cards in the game and can keep any points they earn playing the game. Once this stage of the beta is over, players can start earning cards to build their own decks from scratch, and the real battle begins. So get in early to learn your strategies and prepare your evil self for the CCG's splendiferous completion.

This free-to-play online CCG is a bigger blast than the Rutherford R-239 Atomic Toaster, without the dangerous radioactive fallout!
